

The FCC should not implement any proposal that would lessen Indiana's Telephone Privacy law. This law has protected the integrity of my home from unwanted phone calls. I have had a greater peace in my home since I have been on this list. I still have plenty of opportunity to know of services from other sources. I only wish I could have had this available when I worked midnights. My sleep was constantly interrupted by unwanted solicitations. One person exclaimed that she didn't know I worked midnights.

I replied that the people I do allow to call me know that 'I work midnights and don't call me when I'm sleeping. I didn't want to unplug my phone in case there was a family emergency.

A tenet of capitalism expounds the right of property as private and that we should control who we want on our properties and residences. This form of contact intrudes far too much into our properties and residences. This is especially true when they argue with you as they often do.

This is MY property and I DO NOT WANT THEM TO DISTURB ME IN MY HOME. I have the right to say who comes in my home and I DO NOT WANT THEM IN IT.
